OUTRE OCCURRENCES.

FUNNY FREAKS AND PECULIAR HAPPENINGS.

Weekly Budget of Things Which Take Place Without Apparent Provocation. Incidents and Accidents Due to Planetary Influences.

Two weeks ago THE PRESS contained a story in which was related the discovery of various articles of jewelry near Gualala. The unearthing of these evidences of apparent crime recalled the finding of a human skull near the same place some time ago, and led a pioneer to the conclusion that the disappearance of a man named Harry DeHaven had at last been accounted for.

DeHaven was in some way connected with Dr. Wheeler and the Mendocino outlaws. It seems that he in some manner incurred the enmity of Wheeler, and eventually the latter determined to get him out of the way.

The doctor at that time was considered a respectable member of society. He was married to a very devoted woman, and just previous to the contemplated raid of the outlaws, while they were encamped in the redwoods near Mendocino, Wheeler and his wife would make daily trips into the woods in the direction of the bandits' camp. Wheeler gave out the information that he was absent from town on hunting trips, and would leave the buggy in charge of his wife and visit the outlaws' camp to arrange details of the contemplated raid.

It was while on one of these periodical visits that the conversation between himself and his companions turned on DeHaven. Gaunce, Brown and the other members of the gang remarked on the continued absence of DeHaven, who had not been seen for some weeks.

Wheeler remarked to his companions that they had possibly seen the last of DeHaven, as he was one of those fellows in whom reliance could not be placed, and whose absence was preferable to his company.

The outlaws immediately arrived at the conclusion that DeHaven had been killed by Wheeler, and this assumption was more or less verified by subsequent conversations with Wheeler, who, although he never directly acknowledged the commission of the crime, permitted that impression to remain in the minds of his companions.

Wheeler no doubt imagined that it was necessary for him to teach his subordinates in robbery that no hesitation in the face of danger or double-dealing would be permitted.

It was ascertained from Gaunce, after his arrest and conviction, that Wheeler and DeHaven had been seen near where the skull and jewelry were found years after the outlaws' raid. DeHaven was never heard from after that time. He was said to have been connected with the numerous stage robberies which occurred on the lower coast at that time. Those robberies created intense excitement at the time. It seems from subsequent developments discovered by J. H. Donohoe that the holdups were scientifically arranged between the members of the gang of raiders which then infested the country in the vicinity of the Gualala. When the stages took on treasure at any point on the road resident road agents would be promptly notified of the fact, and the treasure-box would invariably be secured by members stationed at advantageous points.

That Wheeler was either directly or indirectly connected with this gang seems reasonably certain.

Died All Alone.

Joe Rea and family are mourning the loss of a favorite horse. The animal was a present to Mr. Rea years ago, and was a great favorite with himself and children. Previous to locating in this city Mr. Rea gave the old animal in charge of an Indian. Some time subsequent to his departure from Round valley Mr. Rea learned that the horse was dead. The animal had strayed into a deserted smokehouse and the door closed. Weeks afterward the outhouse was entered and the body of the old horse was discovered. He had been in the family for years, and although his days of service were over it was with genuine regret that his death was learned.

Decidedly Unkind.

M. Newfield is disgruntled. He has been camping on the Marks & Newfield ranch for some time past and enjoying his dolce farniente beneath the shade of the giant redwoods of that picturesque country. Saturday afternoon last he made preparations for a grand fiesta for the day following. He purchased a coop of yellow-legged chickens, and had a half dozen nicely roasted for the entertainment. They were placed in a refrigerator to be kept over for the night. The next day, after the table had been spread for the feast, he went to the safe for his chickens. Mother Hubbard's cupboard was not a circumstance to the utter barrenness that met his view. Some epicurean adventurer had been there before him, and the fowls had evanished like the baseless fabric of a dream. It might have been noticed by the close observer that the atmosphere of that section of the country was of a deep blue Sunday afternoon.

The Press Expedition.

Not to be behind its esteemed metropolitan contemporaries THE PRESS will have its own corps of special correspondents in the Klondyke country. It has made arrangements with Julian Kelton, Lee Taylor and James Elwell, who leave San Francisco for the Yukon Wednesday on the steam schooner Caspar, to forward letters and photographs from every point of interest on the journey, from Dyea to Dawson City. Camp Ukiah promises to become celebrated in the mining annals of Alaska, and the readers of THE PRESS will be kept thoroughly posted regarding the developments in the frozen north. Julian Kelton will report on the climatic conditions of the upper Yukon, Elwell will devote his discriptions to the character of the country from a topographical standpoint, while Taylor will describe the mining outlook.

Badly Bruised.

Miss Marie Castelhun, principal of one of the public schools in San Francisco, met with a painful accident Wednesday last. The lady had been spending her vacation at Orr's springs, and started on her return to her home in the city the morning of the day stated. When the wagon reached a point about two miles this side of the springs the team became unmanageable and the vehicle was thrown over the grade. Miss Castelhun was thrown violently to the ground and sustained severe injuries about the head and face. The wagon turned over five times and was badly demolished. Another vehicle was obtained and the lady arrived in this city without further incident.

Destroyed by Fire.

A barn owned by Mrs. T. U. Smith, who lives a short distance south of this city, was destroyed by fire last week. It contained 50 tons of hay. Two horses and a mowing machine were lost in the fire. The damage will aggregate about $1000, on which there was no insurance.

Lee Harbert reports the destruction of a residence owned by J. W. Potter and located on the Blue Lakes road near the line of Lake county. Mr. Harbert was on his way to Laurel Dell when he observed the fire, which occurred early in the morning of the 24th. The loss was not learned.

To Determine Damage.

A decree was entered in the district court Tuesday in the suit of the Noyo Lumber company against the schooner Alice Kimball, directing that testimony be taken before James S. Manley as to the claim for towage of the Noyo company, and that the damage growing out of the collision December 7, 1891, at the mouth of the Navarro river be equally divided between the Alice Kimball and her libellants, E. H. Madison and others. Each side is to pay its own costs.

A Rattlesnake Bite.

Master Volney Van Dyke, son of William Van Dyke of Buck Mountain, near Covelo, was bitten on the foot by a rattlesnake last week. He was picking raspberries with his little sister when the snake bit him. The child immediately summoned her mother, who applied salt and alcohol and also gave him a large dose of ammonia. Master Volney is at present doing nicely.

The Jeram Estate.

The estate of Peter J. Jeram, who was drowned in Eel river several months ago, has been appraised at $67,200. It consists of improved property in this county, $272 in cash, and a $1200 policy in the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York.

A Baseball League.

The Cloverdale Baseball club is agitating the formation of a league between the clubs of Healdsburg, Geyserville, Cloverdale, Hopland, Boonville and Ukiah. A revival of interest in the national game would be greatly stimulated by an organization of the character proposed.

FRASER'S CLOSE CALL

VICIOUSLY ATTACKED BY A WOUNDED DEER.

While Hunting on Pine Ridge He Shoots a Buck—The Animal Makes a Good Fullback and Teaches Fraser a Lesson by Illustration.

One of the most exciting deer hunts ever chronicled in the sporting annals of Mendocino took place last week on Pine ridge, a few miles west of this city.

Together with their hounds Floss Vaughn and Fred Fraser left camp near Low Gap and ascended the ridge that trends southerly from that point. Vaughn traveled along the summit of the divide while Fraser took his position lower down the mountain side. The hounds soon ran a fine buck from cover, and the animal passed about a hundred yards from Fraser, who succeeded in wounding him badly.

After being shot the deer ran into a thick patch of undergrowth and was lost to sight. Fraser hunted through the brush for some time, but was unable to discover the hiding-place of the deer. He finally whistled for the dogs, and when they arrived he sent them into the thick cover to drive out the wounded animal. The dogs ran directly past the deer the first time, the animal lying within a few feet of where Fraser was standing. They finally came back, however, and discovered the deer.

When the deer found that he had been scented by the dogs he sprang to his feet and savagely charged on Fraser, who had exhausted his ammunition. Fraser clubbed his rifle and dealt the frenzied animal a heavy blow on the head. The blow stunned the animal for an instant, and before it could recover Fraser grasped it firmly by the antlers in order to save himself from annihilation.

Fraser soon found, however, that it was far easier to hold onto the deer than it was to let go, and he immediately called to Vaughn to come to his assistance. The buck in the mean time was plunging frantically and trying to cut Fraser with its sharp hoofs. Vaughn quickly went to his companion's rescue, and after a prolonged and exciting struggle the buck was forced to the ground and his throat cut.

The antlers of the savage animal are now on exhibition at Vaughn's fruit store.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

Very Little Business Transacted at Its Annual Meeting.

The board of equalization had an easy time of it at its late session. But two applications for reduction in assessments came before it. One was filed by F. D. Albee of the lower coast section of the county. Mr. Albee requested a reduction in the value of his property from $5520 to $4140. The application was granted and the auditor instructed to make the necessary corrections on the assessment roll.

A. F. Redemeyer applied for a decrease of his assessment on the Vichy springs property from $15,000 to $14,284. The board granted the request.

Death of Mrs. Brower.

The death of Mrs. J. D. Brower sr., which occurred at her home in Potter valley Monday morning last, was not unexpected, although it came as a shock to her many friends in this county. The deceased was a comparatively young woman, being but 55 years of age at the time of her death. Together with her husband and family she settled in Potter 25 years ago. She was a woman who was universally beloved, and leaves five daughters and four sons to mourn her departure. She was buried in this city Tuesday afternoon, and the remains were followed to the grave by a large and sorrowing concourse of friends.

Should Be Enforced.

Apropos of the many forest fires which are now raging in the mountains it would be well for those responsible to remember that it is a misdemeanor for anyone camping on the public lands to leave a fire burning. The punishment for parties so detected and convicted is a fine not exceeding $1000, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both. The fine is paid into the school fund of the county where the act occurred. It is a good law and, if enforced, will prevent the annual forest fires, caused by the negligence of prospectors and campers.

A decision has been rendered to the effect that the state law fixing compensation for public work at not less than $2 a day applies to street laborers.

The Congressman Returns From the Extra Session.

Judge Barham returned from Washington to his Santa Rosa home Sunday last and is very enthusiastic over the outlook for the future in the district he has so well represented.

Immediately after casting his vote with the majority of the house in favor of the Dingley bill he went over to the senate and, assuring himself that the measure would safely pass without delay, he left for home the same day.

The judge finds congressional life conductive to good health for he comes back in the pink of physical condition, notwithstanding the fact that he has had severe labors to perform during the session.

Speaker Reed appointed him to the committees on mileage, irrigation and interstate and foreign commerce. At the solicitation of our representative he was appointed to this last committee in order that he might further the interests of the Nicaraguan canal bill which he will introduce early in the next session of congress.

Judge Barham is very sanguine of success for the canal. He believes that Speaker Reed favors its construction. The appointment of Captain Merry as minister to Nicaragua is another favorable sign, this gentleman being an enthusastic worker for the waterway across the isthmus.

To return to the tariff measure, the judge remarked to a reporter of the Santa Rosa Republican: "California was never so thoroughly nor satisfactorily protected as by the new law. Nearly all our products are amply protected, including lumber, wool, cattle, fruits, wines, dairy products, etc.

"We had a hard fight to get the white pine $2 schedule through, I flooded the conference with messages from my district.

"While of course the Democrats cry down the measure as they do everything which emanates from our side of the house, the mass of the people, especially those engaged in the financial, manufacturing and commercial industries, hail the Dingley bill as the harbinger of assured good times. There is already a healthier tone pervading business and an increased volume of trade."

Judge Barham will remain in Santa Rosa until his official duties call him back to Washington in November. During his absence at the special session the newspapers of the congressional district have been showering compliments upon him for the manner in which he labored in the interests of his constituents. Nor were these papers only those who supported him in the last campaign.

A MAN OF APPETITE.

AN AWFUL ORDEAL FOR A DYSPEPTIC LITTLE LAWYER.

Went Into the Restaurant Just to Have a Few Oysters—Met Mr. Grump, the Brewer, Who Was Lunching a Little Before Going Home to Supper.

"There used to be a famous place for these things down in Atlanta," remarked the portly gentleman as he cautiously eyed the Welsh rabbit and sipped his musty ale.

"Why, don't these suit you?" asked the man who had never traveled.

"Oh, yes, fine, but I was just thinking of a little incident that occurred there."

"A story, is it? Well, let's have it."

"It's not much of a story, but I will tell it the best I can. You see, the place I spoke of was kept by a man named Beirmister and was not only famous for its Welsh rabbits, but for its oysters and hard crabs as well. Delicious they were too.

"There was a dyspeptic little lawyer around town, sharp and shrewd, but a martyr to the stomach. He used to go around with the boys until some one would suggest going over to Beirmister's and getting some crabs and beer; then you could count the lawyer out. The boys would try to persuade him by telling him how delightful were the crabs, how succulent the oysters, but the lawyer would flee from them in terror at the thought.

"About 5 o'clock one fine afternoon in the early spring a friend and myself were journeying toward Beirmister's when we met the dyspeptic lawyer. As usual, he stopped us for a little chat, and we walked down the street together. In a few moments we were in front of Beirmister's, and my friend, taking a different tack, persuaded the little lawyer to enter with us on the plea that we would find no one in at this time of day and that we were only going to eat a few oysters.

"Once inside, we found the place crowded. The seats at the tables were all occupied, except at one table, over in a far corner of the room, at which there were three vacant chairs, the fourth being occupied by a fat German brewer named Grump. We knew Grump, and so went to this table. I introduced the lawyer—Blakely, I believe his name was—to the brewer and ordered beer for the crowd. The lawyer protested, so we left him out.

"'Mr. Grump,' I remarked, 'we are about to have a few oysters. Won't you join us?'

"'Vell, you see, I have alretty somet'ing ordered.'

"'Oh, that's all right,' I insisted. 'A few oysters will give you an appetite.'

"'Is dot so? Yah, I take me a few—chust von leetle dozen.'

"My friend had been engaged in an earnest conversation with the lawyer while I was talking to the jolly old German, and when the waiter came with the beers he told him to bring some crabs, 2½ dozen oysters on the shell and a glass of hot water. He had persuaded Blakely to try some oysters.

"At Beirmister's when an order was given for crabs they invariably brought a dozen, and you paid for as many as you consumed out of that number. The waiter soon returned with oysters, crabs and hot water. In the meantime Grump, who was a great talker, had struck up a conversation with the lawyer, and they were cracking jokes at a great rate.

"Blakely's courage fell when the oysters were placed before him. He manfully drank the hot water and commenced to imitate Grump's heroic style of eating oysters. He managed to down two and then laid his fork gently by his plate and fastened his eyes on Grump. With the aid of a few glassfuls of beer the brewer's oysters had vanished. My friend had managed to get away with two crabs and insisted that Grump help him dispose of the remainder. I was still busy with my dozen oysters.

"'Vell, I help you some,' said Grump, and picking up a knife he went at those crabs like a darky shucking oysters. The dyspeptic watched him as if fascinated and remarked in a sneering tone that came straight from the stomach:

"'You have a good appetite, Mr. Grump.'

"'Yah, I t'ink pretty goot,' and he actively went for another crab. The dish was cleared in a few moments, and I made a mental note that Grump had eaten nine crabs, a dozen large oysters, and drank ten glasses of beer. When the crabs were no more, Grump called to a waiter:

"'Here, Franz, I am waiting.'

"Franz disappeared, and in a few moments brought in a large Welsh rabbit and deposited it before Grump. I could see the little lawyer shrink from the odor wafted across the table, but he was game and would have staid at that table until he died. Grump insisted that we share the dish with him, but all hands refused.

"With apparent relish and a fresh glass of beer he attacked the rabbit, and in an incredibly short time the dish was clear of the least particle. Grump wiped his mouth, folded his napkin, and called for another round of beers. If I had not had a reputation to sustain, I would have refused, but as it was we drained the glasses.

"'Now, I must home be going,' remarked Grump, rising.

"'What's your hurry?' asked the dyspeptic lawyer in his most sarcastic tones. 'Do stay and have something else.'

"'Nein. I must to mein supper go,' answered the German.

"The dyspeptic wilted. Now, if you are looking for a fight, just tell that little lawyer that Grump wants him to eat supper with him. You'll get it quick and strong."—Washington Post.

TIMING BIG PROJECTILES.

How Their Initial Velocity Is Calculated In Tests at Sandy Hook.

To the layman one of the interesting features in a big gun test is the method by which the initial velocity of the projectiles is calculated. When he hears that the modern high power guns often expel a shot at an initial velocity of 2,000 feet a second, a rate that if sustained would mean a mile in three seconds, he realizes the difficulty of calculating the speed. An ordnance officer must have accurate knowledge of the velocity of a projectile, that he may predict its range and penetration and determine the accuracy of the gun. It is a comparatively easy matter, however, with the new instruments to calculate accurately the initial velocity of a projectile, and any one who is fortunate enough to visit Sandy Hook when big guns are being tested may see how it is done.

Two open frames are set up 150 feet apart in front of the gun. Wires are stretched back and forth across these frames, making a screen through which the shot must pass. The wires in each screen form a complete electric circuit, which includes also an electric battery and an electro magnet. The projectile, after leaving the gun, flies through the wire in the first screen, interrupting the circuit and releasing the armature of the magnet. In a space of time so small as to be hardly conceivable the projectile has covered the distance between the two frames and pierced the wire in the second, interrupting its electric current and releasing the armature of its magnet, as in the first case. The interval between the drop of these two armatures represents the time spent by the projectile in traveling 150 feet. This time is indicated by the chronograph in the laboratory near by. Wires run from each screen to the laboratory, which is fitted up with batteries and switchboards.

The armature of the first electro magnet is an iron rod about 3 feet long, which is suspended vertically. This rod falls when the second electro magnet is placed a little below the first, and when it is released it acts as a knife, and, striking the side of the falling rod, makes a slight mark. The distance of this cut or mark from the end of the rod indicates the distance through which the rod has dropped while the projectile is passing from one screen to another. This forms the unit for the calculation of the projectile's velocity in feet per second. New explosives and high power guns have increased the initial velocity of projectiles wonderfully in the last few years. Projectiles may be expelled now with a force that will make them effective at a range far beyond ordinary eyesight.—New York Sun.

Seems as if consumption always picks out the brighest and best. Fully one-sixth of all the deaths that occur in the world are caused by consumption. Many things were once considered impossible. It would be strange if medical science did not make some progress. The telegraph and telephone, the phonograph, the electric light—all were once impossible, and once it was impossible to cure consumption. That was before the time of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Taken according to directions, this standard remedy will cure 98 per cent of all cases of consumption. Consumption is caused and fostered by purity and richness in the blood—surely, certainly cured by the Medical Discovery. It builds up solid healthy flesh and vigorous strength. THE CLARK ROAD LAW.

The Supreme Court Knocks That Freakish Measure Out.

The supreme court Wednesday decided that the Clark road law is a dead letter, its utility having been killed by the county government act. The law was passed by the last legislature taking its name from Assemblyman Clark, who introduced it. It took from the county supervisors much of their former power, providing that all road matters should be under the care and supervision of a board of trustees to be elected on the fourth Saturday of May of each year.

The county government act provides that supervisors shall have jurisdiction over all roads in their respective counties, and by its passage all acts not consistent with it were repealed. Both the Clark and county government acts were signed by the governor on April 1, 1897. The former went into effect May 31, just two days after it was provided that an election of trustees be held. The supervisors of Alameda county proceeded as usual and refused to call an election, as the time had passed, and they deemed the Clark law inoperative this year. Auditor Whidden refused to audit the claim of Fred A. Davis for $[illegible] on the ground that the new law had not been complied with. A writ of mandate was applied for from the supreme court with the result that the court declared the claim must be paid and that the Clark law is illegal for the reason that the county government act was signed after the Clark measure became a law.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—MRS. H. H. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Do You Want to Stop Drinking?

Inquired a young gentleman of a friend who had long been addicted to the liquor habit. "I certainly do," replied his friend. "Why do you ask?" "Because, if you do why don't you stop?" "That's easier said than done," responded the other. "I have tried time and again, but it's no go. I can't withstand the temptation. It's utterly impossible for me to resist. I don't possess the will power you did when you quit." "There was no exhibition of will power on my part," replied the other. "I found it as useless as yourself to resist the temptation; but I wanted to stop, so I experimented with the Fittz Alcohol Cure. It's easy to take; it builds up the system, and after the first five days the desire all leaves you. Consult Dr. G. W. Stout."
